

A Letter from the Owner

September 22, 2014

Dear visitor,

I know home buying can be daunting and that you will likely consider many options that could suit your needs. I just wanted to take the time to tell you a few things about this house, some heartfelt tidbits that tend to get lost in the formal real estate process.

I've lived at 100 Kimberly Drive for the past two years, and they have been my absolute best. It happens that those two years coincide with a lot of wonderful blessings, but this house has been a huge part of my success. It's the first home I have ever owned, the biggest commitment and largest purchase I had made. I cannot express enough the sense of accomplishment that comes with property ownership, having that cornerstone of stability and knowing that I really did it by myself. Not to mention the satisfaction of being smart and deciding to build equity versus spending indefinitely in rent.

I chose this house because of the whole-package appeal – the cozy, refinished brick ranch set on a large, private corner lot in a sprawling neighborhood with beautiful outdoor spaces and abundant storage, equidistance from the center of quaint Travelers Rest and lively downtown Greenville and offering access to a hundred recreational activities.

This is where I cooked my first turkey for a family Thanksgiving. This is where I lounged with my dogs by the fire, cup of coffee in hand. This is where I hosted a summer picnic, tiki torches, barbeque, the works on the deck. This is where I learned several crucial skills like how to install a light fixture and when to plant perennials.

This house has always been loved. You can see that in every detail, all the upkeep and thoughtfulness. I love it too and am sad to leave. Life events are calling though, so I can only wish to discover another perfect-for-me place in that city, and that someone new will frolic, relax, grow and find peace here.

I know it is cliché now, but this house has truly been a home to me. I hope you'll feel the same. Enjoy your tour.

Sincerely,

Aarika L. Woods
